Form 990 (2019)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

The FIRST Robotics Competition (FRC) directly served approximately 97,000 high school students on 3,914 teams. Working with mentors, each team builds a robot in six weeks from a kit of common parts, designing it to meet this year's game challenge, "Infinite Recharge." While a total of 142 events were cancelled due to the global pandemic, some teams were able to participate in one or more 2 to 3-day events at 52 locations, competing for awards for game scores, safety practices, teamwork and other qualitative achievements, stressing the values of cooperation and inclusion. The FRC Program provided students with the experience of applying science and technology to achieve a specific challenge under a time constraint. (Narrative continued on Schedule O, pg. 154-155). This experience developed students' technical skills, teamwork and the ability to deal with the satisfactions and disappointments of a real engineering project. Participation in FRC has inspired many students to go on to college, pursuing careers in science, technology, engineering, and math. Many FRC coaches and mentors work in these fields and help the students develop bonds within their communities and connections to the workforce development pipeline. Students in the FRC program are eligible for college scholarships through the FIRST Scholarship Program.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

The FIRST LEGO League (FLL) reached approximately 318,000 students aged 9-16, on 38,609 teams in 103 countries. The year's challenge was called "CITY SHAPER." Teams worked on game challenges using either LEGO Mindstorms EV3 or LEGO Education Spike Prime technology, applying science and engineering to: identify a problem with a building or public space in their community, design a solution and share that solution with others and then refine it. The FIRST LEGO League Junior (FLL Jr) program served over 184,000 students aged 6-9, on 25,979 teams through a web-based game challenge called "BOOMTOWN BUILD." (Narrative continued on Schedule O, pgs. 155). Using their imagination and LEGO Education WeDo 2.0, teams explored the growing needs and challenges of the people in their community by creating a building with the purpose of solving a problem and making life easier, happier, or more connected for the people that use it. Participation in FLL and FLL Jr has engaged students in a comprehensive experience developing confidence in their ability to address serious issues, enhancing their education in science and math, and exposing them to a STEM career. By progressing through each program and ultimately to FRC, students gain a full suite of technical skills and ongoing encouragement, making it more likely that they will pursue careers in science, technology, engineering and math.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:

The FIRST Tech Challenge (FTC) served approximately 77,000 youths from ages 12-18 on 7,610 teams. Like the FRC Program, FTC is a design and build experience, but uses a smaller kit and less complicated game challenge. In this year's game, "SKYSTONE," each team built a robot and participated in a regional tournament. FTC provides an experience similar to the FRC Program, but is more readily accessible to a broader audience of educators and students, in part because of its lower cost. The FTC experience simulates the excitement as well as the pressure of a real-life engineering project, developing not only the students' technical know-how, but also leadership, cooperation, ability to plan, patience, and teamwork. (Narrative continued on Schedule O, pg. 155). Like the FRC Program, FTC enriches the participating students' ability to deal with the satisfactions and disappointments of a real engineering project. The FTC experience expands students' interest in science, technology, engineering and math, and inspires many to go on to a higher education. Like the FRC participants, students in the FTC program are eligible for some of the college scholarships through the FIRST Scholarship Program. By progressing through each program and ultimately FRC, students gain a full suite of technical skills and ongoing encouragement, making it more likely that they will pursue careers in science and technology.

FIRST engaged three government affairs consultants who assisted FIRST in representing the policy interests of our organization at the state and federal level. These policy efforts are centered around advocating for STEM related legislation, highlighting FIRST's focus on hands-on learning and ensuring FIRST is well positioned to access appropriate funding resources.

Return Reference	Explanation
Part I, Line 2:	FIRST makes grants to U.S. teams, tournament partners, schools, teachers, coaches, and entities hosting program events. Grants are primarily paid to educational institutions who administer disbursement of the funds. Grants ordinarily originate from donors who restrict the use of their contributions to cover teams' expenses based on varying criteria such as need, location, and underserved status. Funds granted are restricted to registration fees, team travel, event expenses, and other essentials. FIRST monitors the use of these funds by often observing the events and confirming through its registration system that all teams receiving grants are participating. Grants are made on condition that the recipient provide receipts, if requested, to substantiate that the funds were used for the intended purposes.

Return Reference	Explanation
Part I, Column (b):	The kit of parts and on-line resources provided to each FRC and FLL team included components having significant value donated by many suppliers. To the extent fair market value can be determined, it is reported as revenue in the fiscal year. In addition, FIRST received a multitude of in-kind contributions of services essential to carrying out its events and programs. Support services have also been donated including building maintenance, marketing, distribution, information technology, engineering, and administrative services. The number and value of these in-kind contributions cannot be determined but were a substantial part of the resources necessary to deliver FIRST's program services during the year.
Part I, Line 32b:	FIRST does not use third parties or related organizations to solicit, process, or sell non-cash donations, except for the sale of donations of publicly traded securities. These are sold through a third-party broker not related to FIRST.
